

Here's how to set up the app!

To get started, click the add or edit button at the lower right to add a user.

If you have your library card handy, you can click the four crop marks with the circle in the center to scan your library card barcode. Otherwise, just type your library card number in the text box that says "Library #".

Now, for the best experience, enter your PIN. It'll be kept on your device and encrypted by the Android OS. Just put it into the field that says, "Library PIN #".

To finish, put a memorable nickname into the field that says "Login nickname"

Before you click on the button that says, "Save Login!", I just want you to know that you can have multiple logins. That can be handy if you want to check out multiple people's holds, like if you have a family and each person has a library card.

Now click on "Save Login!" It'll ask you whether this is the only login you want to save, or if you want to save some more logins. You choose, but you need to click "Save Login!" for every login to add it.

Yay! You've saved your logins. Now, time to do some refinery.

You should probably adjust the settings. There's just two things you might want to change.

To open the settings, just click on the gear button. It's at the top.

It'll ask you to confirm your phone lock. Use your PIN or whatever other method you use to unlock your phone, like fingerprint, face, or iris.

Yay! You're in. Now let's change your settings.

If you think that somebody might unlock your phone and use your library card, turn on the security switch.

If you want to show a login as soon as you open the app, click on the button that says "Pick one", and select your user by their nickname.

Remember, if you want to remove users, it's in the settings.

Done? Great! Just click the "Save" button on the bottom right.

Book time!

To use at the library, just open the app. Make sure that you selected the right user, and you're ready to go!

First, scan the upper barcode labeled "Library #" with the book scanner.

Next, scan the bottom barcode labeled "Library PIN" with the book scanner.

Yay! You're logged in. Just check out your books as normal now!

I hope you like this app. I've been working on this for a year! Please send me feedback. I'm always looking to improve it. You can send me feedback at my mom's email address.

Well, bye!
